Study Online with Open Christian University and Earn a State-licensed Qualification from California, USA

What Does the Bible Say About Handling Money in a Marriage?

Sixbert SANGWA • June 08, 2024

Marriage, as described in the Bible, is a sacred union where two individuals become "one flesh" (Genesis 2:24, Matthew 19:5, Ephesians 5:31). This unity extends beyond the spiritual to encompass all aspects of life, including the management of finances. The Bible offers wisdom on how husbands and wives should approach financial responsibilities while maintaining the proper roles God has assigned within marriage.

In a biblical marriage, the husband is called to be the provider and protector of his family. Ephesians 5:23 teaches that "the husband is the head of the wife even as Christ is the head of the church." This leadership includes the responsibility to ensure that the family's needs are met, particularly in the area of finances. As the spiritual head, the husband is accountable to God for how he manages his family's resources (1 Corinthians 4:2).
This responsibility includes working diligently to provide for the family's needs (1 Timothy 5:8) and making wise decisions regarding financial matters, such as paying bills, managing investments, and planning for the future. However, a godly husband does not lead with a domineering hand but with love, seeking his wife's counsel (Proverbs 31:11) and ensuring that both parties' opinions are valued in major financial decisions.

The Bible also clearly defines the wife's role within marriage. Titus 2:4-5 instructs wives to "love their husbands and children, to be self-controlled, pure, working at home, kind, and submissive to their own husbands." This is not a sign of weakness, but a reflection of God's design for harmony in the household. A wife is a nurturer, caring for her husband by being a source of peace, encouragement, and support.
Proverbs 31:12 tells us that a virtuous wife "brings [her husband] good, not harm, all the days of her life." This nurturing role extends to financial matters, where the wife may submissively provide wise counsel and insight to her husband, working together to maintain peace and unity in the home. While the husband leads in providing, the wife nurtures the family environment, ensuring that the home is a place of tranquility and godliness.

Although the Bible does not explicitly address the topic of separate bank accounts, the concept of being "one flesh" (Genesis 2:24) strongly suggests that finances should be handled jointly under the leadership of the husband. Ephesians 5:23 clearly states that "the husband is the head of the wife as Christ is the head of the church," establishing the husband's role as the primary decision-maker in financial matters. This God-ordained hierarchy should be reflected in all areas of marriage, including financial management.
The husband's role as the head of the wife is a sacred responsibility that should be exercised with love and wisdom. While he bears the primary responsibility for family matters, including financial decisions, he must act in love for his wife, just as she should submissively offer input and contributions. Proverbs 31:11 speaks of a virtuous wife, saying, "The heart of her husband trusts in her." This trust should extend to financial matters, where the husband considers his wife's counsel. However, the final decisions should align with the husband's leadership role, as he is ultimately accountable to God for the stewardship of the family's resources.
Both spouses should approach finances with transparency and open communication, working together toward common goals under the husband's guidance. Proverbs 15:22 reminds us that "without counsel, plans fail, but with many advisers, they succeed." Therefore, while the husband makes the final decisions as the head of the wife, he should prayerfully consider his wife's input and seek to make choices that honor God, benefit the family as a whole, and reflect his role as a loving, Christ-like leader in the home. Consequently, decisions and guidelines regarding bank account management should align with God's design for a Christian family.

The roles of husbands and wives, as outlined in Scripture, are divinely appointed and should not be altered by modern cultural trends. While the Bible affirms the equal spiritual worth and dignity of both men and women, it also establishes distinct roles within marriage. 1 Corinthians 11:3 says, "the head of every man is Christ, the head of a wife is her husband, and the head of Christ is God." This structure reflects God's order, not a superiority or inferiority of one spouse over the other.
Modern teachings on gender equality and empowerment have, in many cases, distorted these roles. Some women boast of financial independence from their husbands, which undermines the biblical design of marriage. A husband's role is to provide for and protect his family, and a wife's role is to nurture her husband and children, supporting the household with wisdom and love (Proverbs 31:27-28).

The success of a marriage hinges on respecting God's design for the union. This design includes clear roles for husband, wife, and children. Financial matters should be approached with this biblical framework in mind. Proverbs 31:11 emphasizes the trust between spouses—particularly between a loving husband and a submissive wife: "The heart of her husband trusts in her, and he will have no lack of gain." This trust, rooted in God's design, strengthens the marriage and glorifies Him.
If there is a lack of alignment with God's design leading to separate financial arrangements, the couple should first address their understanding and application of biblical principles. Through prayer, studying Scripture, and seeking godly counsel (James 1:5), a couple can align their marriage with God's design, fostering unity and trust in all aspects, including finances.

God calls believers to be good stewards of their resources. In 1 Corinthians 10:31, we are reminded to "do all to the glory of God," including how we manage money. This principle of stewardship should guide financial decisions within marriage. Couples are also called to be generous, as 2 Corinthians 9:6-7 teaches that "God loves a cheerful giver." Generosity not only honors God but also strengthens the marriage by aligning it with God's will.

In today's world, financial independence and prenuptial agreements are often viewed as safeguards against marital uncertainties. However, these practices starkly contrast with biblical teachings on marriage. Genesis 2:24 states, "This is why a man leaves his father and mother and bonds with his wife, and they become one flesh." This concept of unity doesn't align with separate financial arrangements. Ephesians 5:31 reiterates this, saying, "For this reason a man will leave his father and mother and be joined to his wife, and the two will become one flesh." The Bible strongly promotes God's decision-making structure for marriages, which doesn't accommodate prenuptial agreements or separate financial accounts. Ephesians 5:23 presents a clear hierarchy extending to financial decisions as well. Any financial arrangements or independence outside of God's design indicate a departure from His will. Malachi 2:14-15 reminds us, "The Lord was a witness between you and the wife of your youth... She is your companion and your wife by covenant." This covenant relationship should be reflected in all aspects of marriage, including financial management.
By following biblical principles, married couples can overcome contemporary challenges and build a strong, unified partnership that reflects God's design for marriage and glorifies Him in every aspect of their lives, including their finances.

Related Articles

- Does The Bible Allow Divorce and Remarriage?
- Does the Bible Restrict Women from Serving as Pastors?
- What Does the Bible Say About Feminism and Gender Equality ?
- Are the 21 Goals of Illuminati Being Implemented in the Global Context?
- Could Modern Women's Empowerment Be a Subtle Threat to the Christian Family?
- Why Do LGBT People Use Six Colors in Their Flag, and How Should Christians Respond?
- Why Does the United Nations, and Not Other Kingdoms, Qualify as the Seventh Head of the Beast?

Further Resources

- Explore Online Ministry Opportunities at Open Christian Ministries (USA)
- Explore Christian Business Services at the Center for Faith and Work (Rwanda)
- Pursue an Affordable Online Christian Degree at Open Christian University (USA)
- Kindly Share Your Question for Consideration in Future Articles, Click Here to Submit

← Back to blog

Comments (2)

Post Comment

Sixbert S. (50 seconds ago)

Thank you very much for your insightful comment, @Don't study that. I appreciate your perspective and have made adjustments to the article to enhance clarity regarding God's hierarchy within the Christian family. Your wise counsel and thoughtful correction are truly valued. God bless you.

Don't study that (12 hours ago)

Teach people the correct thing, a husband's role is to provide and protect his family and a wife's role is to nurture her husband and be his peace and to nurture her children.